Introduction

Homeopathy is the alternative therapy that has been used over 200 years. It was presented for the first time by Samuel Hahnemann (1755-1843), but its basic tents go back to Paracelsus and Hippocrates.^{1,2} Hahnemann worked on the treatment of malaria and found that when a healthy person used the cinchona "a plant from which quinine was derived" symptoms of malaria appear. This was the advent of treatment which is in accordance with the energetic principles of healing.³ In modern medicine the symptom are the direct result of the disease and tries to suppress them but due to homeopathic concept the symptoms are the signs of bodies' effort to conquest disease and tries to reinforce and not to inhibit them. Homeopathy has a holistic view to health and believes that every disease has basic causes that the homeopathic remedies focus on them.⁴ The first Hahnemann book "organon" was published on 1810. He introduced three laws as the basic principles of homeopathy including law of similarity, minimum dose and individuality.

Law of Similarity

One of the main principals in homeopathy is the rule of "like cure likes." Due to this law a substance like coffee which can cause insomnia can be used for the treatment of patients who suffered

Abstract

Homeopathy is an alternative therapy that has been used over 200 years. Homeopathic remedies are used in dentistry to improve psychological or emotional condition of the patients. Although the proposed homeopathic remedies are not supported by systematic reviews, but many clinical trials and case-control studies have been published about the effectiveness of homeopathic remedies for oral and maxillofacial problems. This article reviews some of this homeopathic application in dentistry.

from this problem. Homeopathy accentuate to symptoms more than the external causes of the disease. A remedy for a disease is a substance that develops similar symptoms. The actions of medicine are tested on healthy persons. These tests are called provings. Hahnemann tried different substances on him and other healthy volunteers and published a book named material medica.⁵

Minimum Dose

Homeopathic drugs are product which be obtained from consecutive attenuation of a substance in alcohol or distilled water. This process called potentiation. Because of the substances are diluted they triggers the body's natural system of healing. Immunization is based on the law of similarity. The law of similarity is in accordance with the Arndt-Schulz law. Due to this law every drug in small doses has stimulating effect whereas this substance has an inhibitory effect on larger doses.⁶

Individuality

In homeopathy, all of patient's symptoms are matched to a distinct remedy. The patients' symptoms are not only physical but also include the emotional and mental. The patients' traits
